Let me conclude this hasty scrawl. The talk as i said at the outset, is now of peace; but it will all end in Santa Anna's advancement or his utter downfall. In all his diplomatic arrangements—whenever he has been allowed to argue his point—he has been invariably a winner; at this game, somehow or other he always turns every thing to his own advantage, or at least always has so far.

FATAL HAILBOAD ACCIDENT.—A boy named Daniel Webster Woodman, of Suffalo, was instantly skilled on the redroad, between the Erighton and Newton stations, last evening, by the steamboat train as it was going out. He was standing between the two tracks watching a downward train, and it is supposed he did not hear the steamboat train coming in the opposite direction. The body, which was mangled was decently interred this morning at Brighton. No blame whatever attaches to either train. The body ab been warned from the track, by the Superintendent of the Brighton station. The body was unrecognized till this morning, when his mother, who was traveling with him from Buffalo and whom he had left at a farm-house in Newton, in her search discovered him. GENESEE VALLEY CANAL—We stated, a few days since, that the appropriation for the Genesee Valley Canal would go far toward rendering the section between Mount Morris and Canadea available. But it seems that much of the work upon its suspension under the 'stop Law,' was left so exposed that the loss, from decay and waste of materials, will be very great; and that it will now cost at least $800,000 to finish the section between the points named. The Mount Morris Whig says.—We learn that the appropriation will be expended on the Deep Cut, building a bridge scross the same, the Tunnel, and on the Aquedust. The contracts are to be let about the middle of September."
